Andrew Hasse is a filmmaker and network-builder based in Berkeley, California. He is a graduate of NYU's film and TV program, and is co-founder of Waverly Films, based in Brooklyn, and East Bay Pictures, based in Berkeley. For that past two years, Andrew has been working on the documentary film Edible City (www.ediblecitymovie.com) about the creation of local food systems in the San Francisco Bay Area. Edible City is currently transforming from feature length film into an episodic series for web and television. Andrew is also currently collaborating on a project called The Resilient Network, which is aimed at connecting and supporting resilient communities.
